Mrs. Goldenson Says the Latter Got $500 "to Fix the Judge."

The Accused Attorney's Brother Writes a Letter.

Chief-Judge Simon M. Ehrlich, of the city court, who tried both the suits of Mrs. Sarah Goldenson against the Bowery and Dry Dock Savings Banks, which have given rise to a charge on the part of Mrs. Goldenson that her lawyer, Abraham Joseph, obtained $500 from her under a pretext that it was to "fix the judge," arrived at his office much earlier than usual to-day.

SAYS SHE'LL MOVE NOW.

Mrs. Hawley Chapman Admits the Absorption of a Cocktail.

Conspicuous among the "drunks" lined up in Jefferson Market Court this morning was a tall, slimly proportioned young woman, clad in a pale costume of simple silk and with her shabby white slippers covered with jeweled tins. She carried herself with a queenly air and utterly ignored her surroundings.

Police-man Jordan arrested her about a week ago last night while she was surrounded by an admiring throng of "peepers" who were watching her do the "Kangaroo dance." Three policemen were necessary to take her to the station-house.

Arriving there she gave her name as Cora Shotwell, said she was sixty-eight years old and had been married to a man who she said had been arrested against her by her brother-in-law, a young man named Harry Chapman, who is in an institution for the insane on Long Island.

ATTACKED BY A WOMAN.

Hotel-keeper McKee Has His Former Love Arrested.

ROCKAWAY BEACH, July 6.—Joseph McKee, of New York City, was arrested before Justice Smith yesterday afternoon for having assaulted Charles McKee, proprietor of the Hotel Arlington, on their evening walk on a promenade of the Hotel-Attorney McKee, of New York, and is well known.

Up to two years ago the woman, it is alleged, was known as McKee's wife. They were married in New York City, and McKee was a handsomely furnished cottage on Lawrence St., L. I. When they separated in the Spring of 1912, McKee came here and opened the hotel. He carried with him a trunk containing his wife's trunk, which he carried with him and his wife, the latter to act as housekeeper and Campbell to tend bar. McKee and Mrs. Campbell were seen on their way to the hotel on the morning of July 4, after a week's absence. McKee was seen with a woman, who is believed to be the woman who attacked him, on the morning of July 5. McKee was seen with a woman, who is believed to be the woman who attacked him, on the morning of July 5.
